The Seven Principles of Social Equality—The Emerging Paradigm of Human Compatibility

1. All humans are worthy by virtue of their existence—no human should be exalted as superior to others.
2. All humans have an inherent right to be fed, clothed, and sheltered—with the support of others where necessary.
3. All humans have an inherent right to be educated to learn both physical survival and global adaptation.
4. All humans have an inherent right to freely explore and express their spiritual values through creativity, innovation, and/or any other form of human understanding, compassion, and love.
5. All humans have an inherent right to explore consciousness for the continual acquisition of wisdom.
6. All humans have an inherent right to religious expressions that provide spiritual growth in concert with the wellbeing of all humanity.
7. All humans have an inherent personal and collective responsibility to preserve a planetary social, physical, and spiritual environment for their continued existence.
